Course Overview

This course has been designed for practicing neurosurgeons, neurologists, neurosurgery residents and fellows, and interested allied health professionals.

The 17th Annual Pan-Philadelphia Neurosurgery Conference is co-directed by three area Neurosurgical Training Programs: Jefferson Medical College of Thomas Jefferson University, Temple University School of Medicine and the University of Pennsylvania School of Medicine. This year’s program presents an in-depth, focused look at neuroendovascular therapy, addressing the potential of these approaches to significantly change how we practice. The conference features an update from Governor Edward G. Rendell, discussing important aspects of practice as affected by the changing health care environment in the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania. An analytical review of recent research as well as clinical case presentations round out the day’s events. Cases will be reviewed in Consultants’ Corner sessions.

Participants are encouraged to bring their questions and engage in case analysis with seasoned practitioners. We hope you will join us for this special event!

Objectives

At the conclusion of this course, participants should be able to:

- Describe advances in neuroendovascular therapies, and their potential for improving targeted treatment of neurological diseases.
- Review the importance of proper coding of procedures and diagnoses in medical record keeping.
- Examine the state of healthcare in Pennsylvania as it relates to medical-legal issues and neurosurgical practice.
- Describe and critique recent research studies completed by neurosurgical residents.
- Discuss and analyze relevant case studies in neurosurgery, as experienced by three tertiary care institutions.

Registration Information

The Registration Fee for this course is $300 for physicians and $200 for Residents, Fellows and Allied Health Professionals. The Registration Fee includes all course materials, CME Certificate, continental breakfast, lunch and refreshment break. The Registration Fee does not include parking.
