

Future Health Professionals Program

THOMAS JEFFERSON UNIVERSITY

Explore the exciting world of healthcare with Jefferson's Future Health Professionals Program (FHPP), where students get an inside perspective on careers through hands-on activities and interaction with current practitioners.

Apply by: Sunday, Sept.17, 2023

Discover healthcare career paths and the different roles professionals play in patient care with FHPP.

This free 16-week program serves students in 10th-12th grade from backgrounds and populations underrepresented in healthcare. Classes are held at Jefferson's Center City campus.

Participants engage in hands-on learning, tours of Jefferson facilities, personal development, and conversations with Jefferson students, faculty, and staff.

Learn more and apply (student application and teacher recommendation) by scanning the QR code below or visiting jefferson.edu/outreach.

Professions covered include medicine, nursing, rehabilitation sciences, emergency medical services, rad tech, physician assistants, and more.
