

Post-Doctoral Fellow

Lab of Dr. Snyder

REQ-0033579

Job Details

The Snyder lab is recruiting a postdoctoral fellow to investigate immune mechanisms of retinal and CNS pathology during viral infection. The successful candidate will have an immunology background. Candidates who are recent PhD graduates with experience using in vivo models are preferred.

Job Description

- Collects and assembles data for any type of oral or written presentation.
- Independently develops scientific hypotheses related to ongoing work in the laboratory.
- Independently designs experiments to test hypotheses.
- Independently carries out or delegates procedures for experiments.
- Analyzes results of experiments independently.
- Independently prepares oral and written reports for the P.I. on research to include, but not limited to: coherently and effectively communicating our laboratory research by writing abstracts, manuscripts, grant proposals and data reports for grants and oral presentations with corresponding slide presentation for PI, local and national meetings.
- Performs routine and more difficult procedures, analyzes data and coherently presents results in the form of presentations, abstracts, manuscripts and the basis for grant writing, preparation and submission.

Please go to our Jefferson's careers page, then search REQ-0033579 to apply