

Nature's Humanity

Looking out from my window, I see the bumble bees suckling the sweet nectar from the flowering bush

How strange and beautiful that Nature continues to flourish in the midst of this virus of terror affecting humanity at this time

I think of my nursing colleagues walking into the fray of this terror virus with love, courage and commitment; giving their all for all of us

My heart swells with emotion and pride knowing I belong to this army of love and sacrifice for something bigger than themselves

With all the strength you may have left, smell the air, watch the flowers grow, listen to the choir of birds singing their songs of beauty and hope knowing that all will be well in its time

Dr. Cecelia Borden