

Dixon
Campus

COLLEGE OF NURSING

Jefferson College of Nursing

DIXON CAMPUS

Thanks to a generous gift from community volunteer and philanthropist Edith R. Dixon, Thomas Jefferson University College of Nursing's Abington-Dixon campus will be relocated to Horsham, PA and be known as the Dixon Campus in time for the fall 2020 semester. Selected to provide state-of-the-art nursing educational facilities and resources for students in the region, the new location – 300 Lakeside Drive – is one mile from the current campus and will give the program the capacity to double its enrollment over the next five years.

The new campus is aligned with best practices in designing an academic space that is future-focused.

KEY FEATURES INCLUDE

- 42,000 square feet
- Large-scale state-of-the-art simulation center, where both undergraduate and graduate students will engage in complex clinical scenarios that parallel, anticipate and amplify real-life situations.
- Tiered lecture hall
- High-tech classrooms
- Library
- Collaborative learning and study spaces
- Student lounge
- Walking trail and park
- Access to local restaurants and eateries
- Ample free parking and access to public transportation
- Access to Thomas Jefferson University – Center City Campus facilities, clubs and organizations.

